Ten Commandments
for
Sri Ramakrishna Devotees

By
Revered Swami Ranganathanandaji Maharaj
(13th President of the Ramakrishna Math & Ramakrishna Mission)

1. Be regular and steady in your spiritual practices. This is the best way of serving one's Guru.
2. Keep in touch with the Ramakrishna, Sarada Devi, Vivekananda literature as much as you can.
3. Visit the Math regularly, at least once a week and take part in the prayers and discourses. Do not miss the important celebrations.
4. Try to keep in personal touch with the monks by seeking interviews with them, once in a while, and make the best use of it and not fritter away the time in worldly talks.
5. Kindly remember to keep a percentage of your income for the service activities of the Math and thereby help the Math in rendering its services effectively.
6. Try to visit Belur Math, Dakshineswar, Kamarpukur and Jayarambati at least once in your lifetime, if not more, by properly planning your pilgrimage.
7. Though you are free to visit other religious centres and persons, please remember that it should be without prejudice to your own way of life adopted as per the Ramakrishna Vivekananda traditions. It is better, therefore, you consult the local Head before doing so.
8. Avoid all occult practices and magic and miracles that will harm your spiritual life.
9. Co-operate with the activities of the Ramakrishna Math and Mission, as much as you can, whole heartedly.
10. Make it a point to present only Ramakrishna-Vivekananda literature as gifts on happy occasions to your relatives and friends. This is the best form of spiritual practices for this age.

Twenty-five people met in the State Capitol and have now returned to Denver to present the Humanist of the Year, Mr. Ralph C. Elliott, to the Colorado State Board of Human Rights and the Colorado Association of Humane Societies. The conference also marked Humanist Day, an official day of observation for the association. Here are some photos from the event. The South has gone beyond the bounds of any standards set by the US president. NEW DELHI: US President Donald Trump has once again targeted India and Pakistan as he has done after his Twitter spree on his vacation from August 13. In an August 18 interview with Reuters, Trump accused India of "not doing anything" to help broker a solution to the Afghan Taliban insurgency that has claimed the lives of over 20,000 people.

“They (India) have been very quiet,” he said. “You know why? Because they want to protect their border.” In the same interview, Trump said that Pakistan “is a country where nuclear weapons are all over the place and they have them and nobody knows where they are”. It came after Trump called on Pakistan to stop what he called “giving safe havens” to militants who cross the border to attack US troops in Afghanistan. The Indian government is gearing up to respond to such Trumpian bluster and has organised several conferences on the international scene. It is, however, prepared to wait to see if there is a measured response from the US administration. Balancing priorities in medicine. The question about how the patient and his family prioritize health care cannot be given a simple answer. The factors and considerations involved in making a decision are complex, and the process of weighing and balancing them is subtle. In general, the most important factors seem to be the perceived burdens and risks of the proposed intervention, the patient's condition and preferences, the patient's ability to decide on his own, the patient's age and other social factors, and the patient's wishes for the care he wants to receive. The doctor's attitude, empathy, openness, and willingness to provide ongoing follow-up are probably more influential than any of the other factors. The question about whether patients 82157476af
